NEW QUESTION: 3

Margaret Walker, who would become one of the most important twentieth century African-American poets, was born in Birmingham, Alabama, in 1915. Her parents, a minister and a music teacher, encouraged her to read poetry and philosophy even as a child. Walker completed her high school education at Gilbert Academy in New Orleans and went on to attend New Orleans University for two years. It was then that the important Harlem Renaissance poet Langston Hughes recognized her talent and persuaded her to continue her education in the North. She transferred to Northwestern University in Illinois, where she received a degree in English in 1935. Her poem, "For My People," which would remain one of her most important works, was also her first publication, appearing in Poetry magazine in 1937.

The passage suggests that Walker's decision to become a poet

A. was primarily a result of her interaction with Hughes.

B. was not surprising, given her upbringing.

C. occurred after her transfer to Northwestern University.

D. was sudden and immediately successful.

E. occurred before she entered college.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The passage doesn't specifically say that Walker was writing poetry before she entered New Orleans University. Eliminate (A). Hughes recognized her talent, but he didn't create it, so eliminate (B). Hughes recognized her talent before she transferred to Northwestern, so eliminate (D). The passage, if anything, implies that Walker wrote poetry for some time before publishing anything, so eliminate (E). The passage makes reference to her parents' occupations and encouragement, implying that they had an influence on her decision to become a poet
