- E. A security group with a rule that allows outgoing traffic on port 443
- F. A network ACL with a rule that allows outgoing traffic on port 443.

Answer: A,E

Explanation:

Explanation

Since here the traffic needs to flow outbound from the Instance to a web service on Port 443, the outbound rules on both the Network and Security Groups need to allow outbound traffic. The Incoming traffic should be allowed on ephemeral ports for the Operating System on the Instance to allow a connection to be established on any desired or available port.

Option A is invalid because this rule alone is not enough. You also need to ensure incoming traffic on ephemeral ports Option C is invalid because need to ensure incoming traffic on ephemeral ports and not only port 443 Option E and F are invalid since here you are allowing additional ports on Security groups which are not required For more information on VPC Security Groups, please visit the below URL:
